Overview

The highest trekking peak in Nepal

The highest of Nepal's trekking peaks, Mera is more about altitude and endurance than technical climbing - and rewards you with five 8,000 m peaks on the skyline.

Mera Peak (6,476 m) is one of Nepal's classic 6000m objectives, climbed from a base camp in the Mera La with a careful acclimatisation plan and a strong local climbing crew.

We run it as a fully guided expedition - fixed lines on the technical ground, experienced Sherpa support and generous summit windows - so you can focus on the climb itself.

Highlights

- Highest trekking peak
- Five 8,000ers from the top
- Remote Hinku approach
- Glacier summit, low technicality
