Overview

The western anchor of the Dhaulagiri Himal

Also called Dhaulagiri VII, Putha Hiunchuli rises at the wild western end of the Dhaulagiri range on the edge of Dolpo - a quiet, scenic 7,000 m objective.

Putha Hiunchuli (7,246 m) is one of Nepal's classic 7000m objectives, climbed from a base camp in the Dolpo edge with a careful acclimatisation plan and a strong local climbing crew.

We run it as a fully guided expedition - fixed lines on the technical ground, experienced Sherpa support and generous summit windows - so you can focus on the climb itself.

Highlights

- Remote western Dhaulagiri
- Quiet, low-traffic peak
- Edge of the Dolpo wilderness
- Glaciated summit slopes
