Overview

A remote 7,000er above the world's highest lake

Rising beyond Tilicho Lake in the Annapurna massif, Tilicho Peak is a quiet, seldom-climbed 7,000 m expedition - long glacier approaches and sustained snow slopes to a summit ringed by the Annapurnas and Dhaulagiri.

Tilicho Peak (7,134 m) is one of Nepal's classic 7000m objectives, climbed from a base camp in the Annapurna with a careful acclimatisation plan and a strong local climbing crew.

We run it as a fully guided expedition - fixed lines on the technical ground, experienced Sherpa support and generous summit windows - so you can focus on the climb itself.

Highlights
